

Many aspects of the way people dress today are influenced by global fashion trends.

International fashion trends exert influence on numerous aspects of nowadays people's attire nowadays.

Commented [ET1]: This is an adverb for the whole sentence, not an adjective for people.

Some people think that shops should not be allowed to sell food or drinks that are scientifically proven to be bad for people's health.

A number of individuals believe that the sales of scientifically proven detrimental harmful food or drinks should be forbidden.

Commented [ET2]: This does not necessarily mean detrimental to health.

If I were you, I would avoid building large complex phrases and use clauses instead. Here you could easily reduce the adjective clause and paraphrase more naturally: food or drinks scientifically proven to be harmful to people's health

When a building is designed, the most important factor is the intended use of the building rather than its outward appearance.

In terms of buildings design, the intended use of the building is the most instrumental element factor instead of its exterior look.

Commented [ET3]: 1. Intended use on its own does not necessarily mean the use of the building. It could be referring to the design itself.
2. Without this, there is no reference for "its" at the end of the sentence

Commented [ET4]: Not the same as FACTOR:
Element: (مثل ستون یا پنجره) عنصری در طراحی
Factor: عاملی که بر طراحی تاثیر می گذارد

Commented [ET5]: "Exterior" alone does not necessarily mean the design and look of the exterior.