

Printed books/newspapers more comfortable, distraction-free reading experience: Unlike digital devices: printed materials no notifications, advertisements, other online distractions > concentrate better > future: people who need to concentrate e.g. ADHD, elderly: read on paper

1. In addition, printed books and newspapers provide a more comfortable and distraction-free reading experience that may be more rewarding for readers. When reading printed books and materials, you can concentrate easier and better; whereas, digital devices can be easily distracting because of the notifications, advertisements, and other online distractions that one might constantly ~~receive~~encounter/face. These can be particularly challenging for those who suffer from certain conditions, such as ADHD, or for the elderly. So, people who need greater concentration are more likely to prefer reading on paper ~~for better focus and a more effective reading experience.~~

---

3. In addition, printed books or newspapers provide a more comfortable ~~and~~ distraction-free reading experience for people. ~~Despite Unlike~~ when they read on digital devices, readers do not receive any notifications or advertisements whenever they read printed materials. Thus, they can concentrate better on what they read. In the coming years, people with concentration problems, ~~person~~ those with ADHD and autism or the elderly, will prefer to read on paper.

Commented [ET1]: Repetitive and redundant: You have already explained the reason why they would read on paper. Follow your notes and avoid adding ideas in the writing phase.

Commented [ET2]: Follow your notes: this is a part of your main idea, too.

Commented [ET3]: Despite = على الرغم
Unlike = بخلاف

Commented [ET4]: The original was:
Unlike digital devices, readers do not...
This compares DIGITAL DEVICES and READERS, which makes no sense.

2. In addition, printed books /and newspaper have been extremely provide a more

Commented [ET5]: Not the verb to use with EXPERIENCE

Commented [ET6]: Follow your notes: you are comparing prints with online materials.

comfortable, and distraction-free and better reading experience. Unlike the digital devices,

Commented [ET7]: Not in your notes and not a part of your main idea printed materials do not have notifications, ads and other online distractions, also so it they make allow the readers to concentrate better. So, in the future some individuals who need to

Commented [ET8]: You are discussing the result, not adding another idea.

Commented [ET9]: In future = از این به بعد
In the future = در آینده concentrate, like people with ADHD, and the elderly, so it is better for them to will read on

Commented [ET10]: This is the linker for the whole sentence (the whole sentence is the result of the previous one), so it must come at the beginning, not here.

Commented [ET11]: This is a suggestion. You are proving why they WILL read on paper.

paper.

4. ~~First and foremost~~ In addition, printed books will ~~be~~ provide a more comfortable and

Commented [ET12]: This is your second main idea, not the first one.

Commented [ET13]: See comment 2

~~distraction-free~~ distraction-free reading experience. ~~They will be less likely to do as digital~~

~~devices.~~ Moreover, ~~Unlike digital devices,~~ printed materials ~~would~~ have ~~niehter~~ neither

Commented [ET14]: Your notes say unlike digital devices: printed materials... so here you must compare those two based on what you have in your notes.

Commented [ET15]: You are not adding ideas here. follow your notes.

notifications ~~and~~ nor advertisement and other online distractions. ~~They, so they~~ provide a

Commented [ET16]: What you are discussing here are not future issues. They are facts → simple present context in which people ~~will~~ can concentrate better ~~than the others.~~ ~~It is obviously~~ Therefore,

Commented [ET17]: 1. Correct: It is obvious that...
2. Never use this phrase unless something is a law of nature. For example, you can say it is obvious that people die without air. But your results and reasons are not necessary obvious to everyone.

in the future people who need to concentrate, such as those ~~are with~~ ADHD and the elderly, will read ~~more~~ paper books and newspapers ~~due to the fact that they need to concentrate.~~

Commented [ET18]: The reason should come BEFORE the result.

Commented [ET19]: You have frequently used double spacing instead of a single space between words.