Some people believe that this is beneficial for ~~sports' world~~ the world of sports, whereas others think ~~otherwise~~. I will discuss these two views before presenting my own.

Commented [ET1]: You cannot do a way. You can use or follow an approach.

Commented [ET2]: THE WORLD OF SPORTS is an idiomatic phrase and cannot be changed like this. You can use the sporting world instead.

Commented [ET3]: This simply means they DO NOT think that it is beneficial. It doesn't necessarily mean that it is detrimental.

Commented [ET4]: This third sentence is redundant when you already have two.

2. ~~Some individuals argue that, m~~ Many companies ~~have~~ provide financial support to sports as a way of advertising themselves ~~s and~~ Some individuals argue that this is better beneficial for the world of sports, while others believe that it can have bad effects to sports. I believe that this trend is generally beneficial for sports.

Commented [ET5]: 1. Correct: better
2. You aren't comparing two things here and saying which one is better than the other.

Commented [ET6]: 1. Correct: bad effect on
2. Repetitive and redundant, especially considering you use it AGAIN in the next sentence.

3. Some companies sponsor *sports to advertise themselves. Some ~~may~~ argue that this is a positive trend for the world of sports, whereas others believe that it ~~may is~~ not be beneficial to the sports industry. I will discuss these two views before presenting my own opinion.

Commented [ET7]: According to the topic, people DO say this.

Commented [ET8]: 1. Not the same as the world of sports: this is used when we consider sports as an industry, which is not the case here.
2. Repetitive and unnecessary
