

Future readers not used to using prints: nowadays students deal with computer and files > addicted to reading files on screen > cannot tolerate printed book or mag > future: they grow up and become adults > both young people and adults used to reading on screen > stop buying prints

Finally, future readers will not be used to using printed materials. Thanks to state-of-the-art technology, nowadays students deal with computers and files for doing their homework or reading on a screen. By degrees, they are becoming addicted to working with these kinds of contents reading on a screen. Therefore, they cannot tolerate conventional books and newspapers, and even find them awkward. Now-These students will grow up then will and become future adults. Thus, adults and young people will read on screen in the future.

Consequently, which means nobody will purchase printed materials.

Commented [ET1]: You must begin by presenting the main idea.

Commented [ET2]: Not in your notes

Commented [ET3]: According to your notes, this comes in the next part .

Commented [ET4]: By degrees = gradually
So this is something that "is still happening".

Commented [ET5]: Avoid several short and simple sentences when they can be joined to create longer complex sentences.
