

Some believe that tackling environmental issues should be managed by a global organization instead of being handled individually by national governments. Do you agree or disagree with this belief?

A number of individuals argue that addressing environmental problems ought to be managed by an international organization rather than being handled individually by national governments. I strongly believe that a global organization can perform significantly better than national governments mainly ~~for~~ due to insufficient resources.

~~National governments are not capable to deal with these kinds of pressing problems.~~

~~Environmental issues can have disastrous consequences for the world.~~ Tackling ~~with these~~ pressing problems like environmental issues needs substantial resources that governments lack. ~~These R~~ esources including, include a large budget, state-of-the-art technology, cutting-edge equipment and qualified experts and staffs. Undoubtedly, there are few countries that have all of these ~~tools~~ simultaneously. ~~So, while~~ in a worldwide establishment, members such as national authorities can share their resources and become a robust system. For example, they can collect and give a loan whenever it is necessary. Thus, a global organization can act more powerful and achieve numerous aims which national governments could not afford.

Apart from sharing facilities and technology, dealing with environmental problems needs coordination and communication. ~~They~~ Anyone who wants to solve them needs to adopt the optimum approach. For instance, imagine an environmental issue, such as enormous oil spill from a ship that contaminates water, arises in the middle of the ocean ~~such as enormous oil spill, which contaminate water~~. ~~Other ships and marine life which are in these~~ this area are damaged ~~and~~ Pollution can spread to surrounding areas. As a result, it can exert pernicious effects on a lot of countries. A global organization ~~included~~ including representatives s of all the countries ~~can perform better than a local government. All~~ can inform all the relevant members ~~become informed~~ easily, and they can decide and take essential measures rapidly.

Some people believe that local governments know their area well better compared to foreign organization s, and they can decide and act better. Nevertheless, all the countries have members in the international organization. ~~They who~~ can share their knowledge ~~and experience continuously to solve this problem~~. Therefore, global organization can excel in dealing with environmental problems due to better resources and networks which are necessary.

In conclusion, global organization can excel in dealing with environmental problems due to better resources and networks which ~~is~~ are necessary. ~~National governments usually face lack of resources.~~
