

CA: environmental problems > stop buying paper

Refute/Solution: paper from other sources e.g. recycling will resolve

Some may argue that, because of environmental problems and becoming more sustainable, people will eventually stop buying paper-based books and newspaper. But I think that paper can be provided from other resources such as recycling, and this will resolve the aforementioned issue.

Introduction:

It is said that in the future, since everyone will be able to read everything online and cost-free, no one will purchase printed newspapers or books. I strongly disagree mainly due to economic issues.

Ideas:

Publishing requires certain budgets, even the online type > online advertising and alternative ways of revenue will not cover the cost of paper, editors and etc. in this economy > all the crises in the world > economy will not get better > future: by giving out the books and newspapers free the publishers will go bankrupt

Many will prefer physical format for different reasons: Since many years ago that online books and newspapers were introduced and published > because of keeping a personal library (books) or because of visual problems (newspapers) > many people still prefer physical format > no reason for future to be different > not all people would buy online books

In conclusion, I strongly believe that a group of people will still buy physical books and newspaper in the future and not everything will be published online and distributed for free. This will be a result of their some people's preferences and preventing publishers trying to avoid ~~from~~ going bankrupt.
